..still lemons (ha ha)

I apologize that I haven't managed to get this site upgraded. I have been a total nightmare, and taken more than two months. How can this be so hard. The new site is not what I had hoped. It is different, but I don't feel that it is better, and this is a serious problem since it has cost me at least half of what I make off these sites in any given year. Now that's a bummer, what is more disturbing is that what I was promised was not delivered. No name calling, just frustration. I do hope that you all as customers now that if there is something wrong with a pattern that I send, I will do my very best to "fix it". I have had instances where the USPS has LOST mail, and I covered it, people have asked for countless revisions, and I just accept that as part of business, and I spend many more hours making custom patterns than I ever am compensated for. I do this for love of graphics, not for money. However, that said, it does cost me money to run.

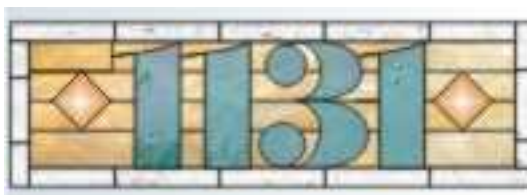

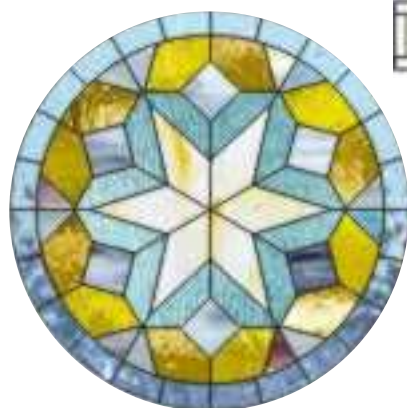

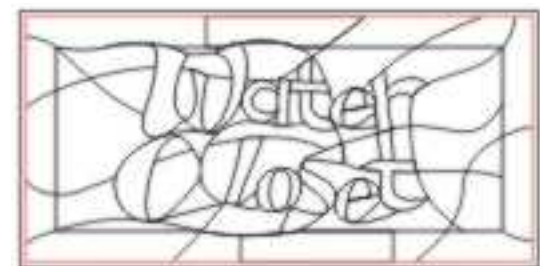

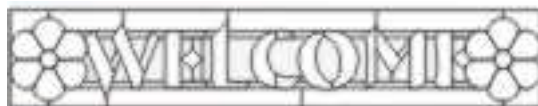

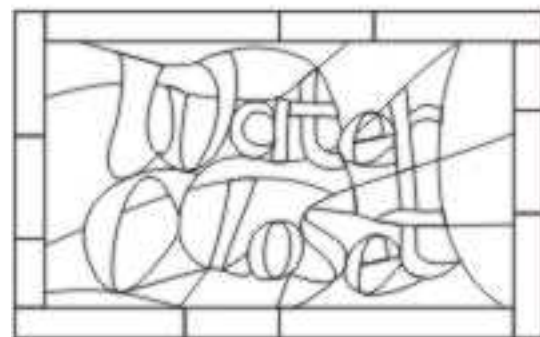

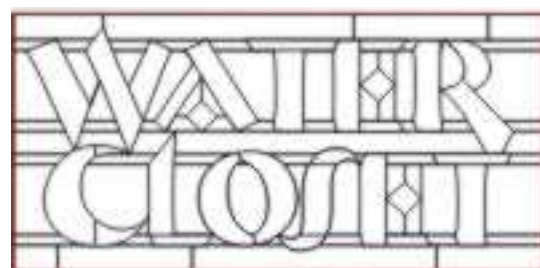

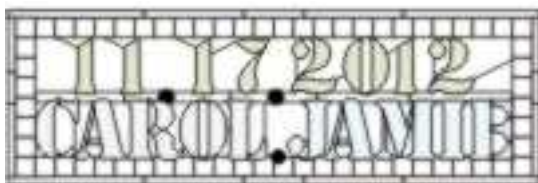

Here is a screen shot of the proposed new site. I have apparently irretrievably lost my "rollover" of the black and white (which I named as a necessity in the contract). I don't believe that anything was gained, but you all can be the judge. Replying to me that you still "like" the site, that it is still "easy" to use, would be terrific and hopefully give me the boost I need.
